FILION RESIGNS AS SELECTMAN

POLICE SEIZE STRANGER, END 'G-MAN' ESCAPADES THAT THRILL NEWMARKET

Considerable excitement prevailed in the downtown section of Newmarket last Sunday morning when a South Berwick, Me., man, using a flashlight in broad daylight, caused bewilderment for several residents.

According to police, the man, who was identified as Harold Lewis Irving, 36, was first observed by several bystanders at the corner of South Main and Exeter streets. They reported to Police Officer John Valliere that the stranger, in his shirtsleeves and without hat, was acting in a peculiar manner with his flashlight.

By the time that Officer Valliere reached the scene the man had appeared at the home of Harold Meserve on South Main street, and the latter reported the intruder had been peering in his windows and walking in his flower garden. The pursued man had then gone into the street and stopped a lumber truck driven by Charles Edgerly and with "Buck" Bailey also in the cab. Still flashing his flashlight, Irving is said to have looked under the chassis and asked to see the driver's license. The truckmen were mystified as the stranger finally climbed into the cab and commanded them to go ahead.

Meserve and Officer Valliere started in pursuit in Meserve's auto but failed to overtake the truck in which their mysterious fugitive was riding. Returning to town, Officer Valliere waited only a short time before the truck was sighted on its way back to Newmarket, with the unwanted passenger still aboard. Irving willingly showed his identification papers, according to police reports, but was reluctant to go to headquarters for questioning. He is said to have insisted he was a "G-Man" arranging for a conveyance to pass through Newmarket.

Finally Officer Valliere placed him in custody in handcuffs, and took him to the police station. The Newmarket police contacted Chief of Police Pierce of South Berwick, who said the man was a former patient of the State Hospital in Augusta. During the afternoon, Chief Pierce and two of his officers came to Newmarket to take the man home to Maine.

It was not known to Newmarket police how Irving happened to go to Newmarket.

Freed By Police On Doctor's Advice

A Portsmouth man, who was visiting in Newmarket, was arrested on South Main street in that town for drunkenness last Friday afternoon, but was released by Newmarket police a short time later upon the advice of a physician, who said he had been treating him for a heart ailment.

He had been taken into custody, by State Trooper Clifton Hildreth and turned over to Police Officer John Valliere.

NEWMARKET TO GET FIREWORKS FOR 'FOURTH'

The Board of Selectmen has decided that Newmarket will be one of comparatively few communities in New Hampshire which will permit sale and use of fireworks during the coming Fourth of July observance.

Gov. Robert O. Blood had urged Granite Staters to forego the customary "Fourth" fireworks during the remainder of the war, but when Newmarket officials contacted the chief executive and explained their reason for wanting to permit fireworks, Governor Blood consented.

Their reason was that several Newmarket business men had stocks of considerable size left over from last year's supply and they stood to lose a considerable investment unless they could dispose of the fireworks, which a year from now might become useless.

Governor Blood was sympathetic with this particular situation, according to the selectmen, and since no further stocks will become available until after the war, the board made its logical decision.

Despite the permission for sale of the fireworks, however a spokesman for the board made this suggestion:

"Don't forget to buy more war bonds and stamps."

Kennedy Fourth In Golf Tourney

Les Kennedy, former golf professional at the Rockingham Country Club in Newmarket and a sensation in last winter's tournaments in the South, placed fourth with 149 in the sectional tournament of the Hale America National Open championship in Newton, Mass., last Friday.

Ted Bishop, New England champion, emerged in top place.

It was still indefinite, however, just how well New England would be represented in the main event, which will be held in Chicago.

GRISWOLD AND FATHER GO IN NAVY TOGETHER

(Official Navy Dispatch)

Portland, Me.—Edward Earl Griswold, 45, and his 17-year-old son, Charles Clifford Griswold, of Newmarket, N. H., were enlisted in the naval services last Sunday, at a public ceremony held at Deering Oaks, here in observance of Avenge Pearl Harbor Day.

The elder Griswold joined the Naval Reserve as a machinist mate, first-class. During the first World War, he served in the Navy with a destroyer fleet, receiving an honorable discharge after the conclusion of hostilities.

Mr. Griswold is a watchmaker, and for the past nine years has conducted a jewelry store of his own in Newmarket. For the past two years he has been employed at the Portsmouth Navy Yard, repairing and checking the operation of precision instruments used aboard ships. He resides with his wife, Mrs. Marian Griswold, at 37 Exeter street, Newmarket.

Charles C. Griswold joined the regular Navy for a six-year period, declaring that he intends to make the Navy his life's career. He enlisted as an apprentice seaman, and will be sent to a training station for his recruit training.

Lieut. J. C. Gaking, U.S.N.G. in charge of the Portland recruiting station, administered the oath to the Griswolds, as well as 42 other men who were inducted in a program at which Senator Ralph O. Brewster declared that "six months from today the Japanese are likely to be on the defensive all over the Pacific."

"The American Navy is on the alert from Dutch Harbor to Australia," he declared, "and the Japanese are beginning to realize that their day of reckoning for Pearl Harbor is approaching."

After the ceremony, Lieut. Gaking told the Newmarket News that the Griswolds would be placed on inactive duty and sent to their home in Newmarket to await call to active service.

In accordance with plans announced in last week's issue of this newspaper, young Griswold was given a farewell reception at Newmarket high school last Friday and given official notification of his graduation two weeks in advance of the senior class, of which he was a member. He was a star athlete during his high school days.

K. of C. Auxiliary Elects In Exeter

The annual banquet of the Women's Auxiliary of Exeter Council, Knights of Columbus, was held at the Exeter Inn, Monday night, with Lieut. Gill, chaplain of the Portsmouth Naval Prison, as speaker.

These officers were elected: President Harold E. Carbonneau; vice president, Mrs. Catherine Noonan; secretary, Miss Christine Hogan; treasurer, Mrs. Lillian Croteau; and members of the executive board, Mary Hallinan, Marion Wheeler, Lillian Morrisette and Veronica Buckley, and auditor, Katherine Donovan.

CHAIRMAN QUILTS BOARD IN NEWMARKET TO TAKE POSITION AT NAVY YARD

Theodore Filion has resigned as a member of the Newmarket Board of Selectmen, of which he was serving as chairman. He has taken position at the Portsmouth Navy Yard and his withdrawal from public office was in compliance with government regulations which forbid Federal employees to hold political posts.

The resignation was placed before the other members of the board, Albert Sewall, secretary, and Stanley Szacik, and accepted.

Mr. Filion, who started on his new position Monday, will continue to reside in Newmarket, where during his service on the board there have been a number of improvements. Virtually all of the $40,000 that was owed in back taxes has been erased from the town books; a rubbish collection system has been inaugurated; sidewalks, which were not improved for at least 30 years, were reconstructed, and the town purchased its own trucks and snow removal equipment without any extra appropriation for the highway department.

MYSTERY IN NEWMARKET DOG DEATHS

A wave of mysterious dog deaths swept Newmarket this week, and in one instance an aroused owner had the police exhume the body of his pet, which the authorities had buried, before he was satisfied that the animal had died without outward sign of violence.

It is suspected, however, that some, if not all of the canines, were poisoned, as in each case the dogs collapsed and died instantly. They had shown no signs of illness before succumbing.

On Monday morning, Charles O'Brien of Spring street, reported the demise of his dog, and on the same day, Raymond Martin of South street lost his pedigreed wire-haired terrier, which dropped dead on Church street.

Tuesday morning, Alfred Hood let his dog out of the house and the animal seemed to be in good health. After a few minutes, the animal started to come back to the house, and as he was approaching, a member of the family saw him collapse.

Police were informed of the dog deaths, but if there is poisoning in such cases it is difficult to trace. In any case, little can be done unless the owner determines the cause of death through a veterinarian's autopsy.

The best way to prevent possible violence against dogs is for their owners to keep them where they can be closely watched.

Selectmen Plan To Leave Filion Vacancy Unfilled

Stanley Szacik and F. Albert Sewall, the remaining members of the Newmarket Board of Selectmen, announced today that no one would be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Chairman Theodore Filion.

It was pointed out that the bulk of the board's most important work for the fiscal year, such as tax evaluations and other matters affecting the town's financial condition, have been completed, and there would be no advantage in a new appointment.

From now until the next town election in March, it was said, the board will be confronted with only routine business which Selectmen Szacik and Sewall will have no difficulty in handling.

Mr. Filion was elected to his first term as selectman in 1940 and previously had served three terms as town treasurer.

He is a native of Newmarket and comes from one of the town's best known families, several of his brothers being engaged in various business enterprises.

He was a member of the United States Navy from 1922 to 1926 and saw service at distant bases, including Manila and Pearl Harbor. He achieved a rating as submarine torpedo man upon completion of torpedo diving courses in New London, Conn., and Newport, R. I. He also was on hydrographic duty in the West Indies.

MILL OVERPASS RAZING SHIFTS AUTO TRAFFIC

The section of Main street in Newmarket, extending from Central street to Elm street, was closed to automobile traffic last Sunday from 7 a. m. until 3 p. m. while workmen who have been wrecking the $1,000,000 weaved shed formerly owned by the Newmarket Manufacturing Co. were working on the overhead passage extending from that building across the thoroughfare to the factory building now occupied by the Rockingham Shoe Co. and the Sam Smith Shoe Corp.

During the period, all except the steel frame of the overpass was razed, and the "skeleton" that remained was removed later in the week by a huge crane from the General Electric Co. of Lynn, Mass., which has purchased most of the steel structure of the huge weaved shed.

Scores of persons, standing on the sidewalks or gazing from shoe factory windows, watched the delicate feat of engineering performed by the Lee Crane Service Thursday. Two attempts were made before the giant crane could manipulate the steel span, estimated to weigh about 10 tons, be (continued on page four)

Father's Day

With Father's Day just around the corner, on Sunday, June 21, it's a good time to reflect that it's just as well that the old saw, "like father, like son," doesn't hold true in the theatrical world.

If it did, Benny Goodman would be a tailor, Errol Flynn would be a biology professor, George S. Kaufman would manufacture men's garments, Eddy Duchin would be compounding prescriptions, Lionel Stander would be fixing teeth up in Mount Vernon, and Jimmy Stewart would be a hardware merchant. Gary Cooper would be a justice of the Montana State Supreme Court and Wayne Morris would be a stationery supply firm executive.

Although in many cases, particularly in legitimate acting and music, a distinguished talent is handed along through several generations, it's rather remarkable, on the whole, how little influence the paternal mode of living has exerted on our entertainment luminaries. . . . Bela Lugosi's father was a bank teller; John O'Hara is the son of a Pennsylvania country doctor. . . . and Brian Aherne is the son of an architect.

If Desi Arnaz followed in the footsteps of his father, he would be a politician in Cuba, and Harry Carey would be a judge. . . . George Brent would be a newspaper editor and Charles Boyer, a wholesale dealer in farm machinery. . . . William Saroyan would be raising grapes in California, instead of Cain with drama critics. . . . and Bing Crosby would be studying figures instead of notes. . . . (his father is an accountant).

No chip off the old block is Spencer Tracy, son of a truck salesman. . . . Robert Montgomery, son of a vice president of the New York Rubber Company. . . . Jack Benny, son of a tailor.

Progress

Rides through the ages a valiant knight,

A rider both cautious and bold; Never resting nor out of sight, And never growing old.

To some his aspect is cold and stern,

To others calm and mild. And some see that rider at every turn,

With looks both savage and wild.

Sometimes he goes on plodding and slow,

At others by leaps and bounds. Oft times he canters to and fro, Then again his speed confounds.

His steed is fractious; at times its eye

Is restless, fierce and wild; Sometimes shrinking, timid and shy,

And sometimes gentle and mild.

The reins of Progress are stout and strong,

And firm and strong his grip. The road he travels is rough and long,

His booted spur and whip

Is pricking and lashing his steed. Mankind

He guides with unerring skill. What one man misses some other must find.

Progress is never still.

Scrap Rubber Worth $25 A Ton

Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce, announced this week that, in order to stimulate the collection of scrap rubber for reclaiming, Rubber Reserve Company will buy scrap rubber in carload lots anywhere in the United States at $25 per ton for run of mine scrap and worn out tires.

The program for collecting the rubber is being formulated by Rubber Reserve Company, WWPB and OPA.

The increased price is intended to provide small collectors throughout the country with a financial, as well as patriotic, incentive for putting forth greater efforts in the collection of scrap rubber, which is badly needed.

I wish to thank you for your issues of the Newmarket News regularly each week. The articles sure are interesting, especially the column of "Polish Club Notes," which appeals to any of my age.

This short letter will inform you of the change in my address from Fort Devens to a home of a different name.

GONIC, COCHECO WOOLEN MILLS' PRODUCTION VITALLY IMPORTANT TO NATION'S MILITARY EFFORT

Company Operating 100% On Army, Navy Materials Being Used The World Over; Make 100,000 Sailor's Blankets Monthly

With the industry's wheels geared for 100 percent war effort production, the Gonic Manufacturing company of Gonic, the Cochecho Woolen Manufacturing company of East Rochester, and the corporation's other two mills, the Ware Woolen and Hampshire Woolen companies, both at Ware, Mass., are playing a vital role in our national military program.

Pouring forth from these mills are steady streams of woolen lining and fabric materials which go to make up the diversified uniforms of United States' ski troopers, in Alaska and Iceland, sky troopers in the South Pacific, tank corps units in Libya, combat troops in Australia, Newfoundland, Ireland and England, and for our armed forces wherever they may be sent in the world's most gigantic war program.

Products On Display

Appropriately in keeping with the patriotic significance of National Flag Week, several of the company's products are currently being shown in the windows of the Realty block quarters formerly occupied by the Gofkauf stores. The exhibition, arranged under the direction of Francis E. Splaine, Gonic and East Rochester mills' agent and company executive, assisted by Charles A. Jarvis, Gonic mill office manager, is effectively displayed in a setting of red, white and blue bunting decorations and is attracting hundreds of passers-by.

100,000 Blankets

Fulton Rindge of Longmeadow, Mass., the mills' corporation treasurer, said in a recent interview with a representative of the Observer that the company's four plants are producing over 100,000 white virgin wool Navy blankets monthly alone. In addition, officers' rank markers manufactured by the company are being worn on the shoulders of Naval men positioned on the seven seas.

One battleship, said Mr. Rindge, was recently launched outfitted entirely with blankets produced by his company. With regard to the U. S. Naval officers' shoulder marks, Mr. Rindge explained that the forms or so-called boards are being manufactured at the Rochester mill of the Spaulding Fibre Co., Inc., and were developed by Robert D. Marsh, superintendent of that plant. The fabric covering is produced at the Gonic Mfg. Co., and the gold braid and stars are made by the Arnold Mfg. Co., at Pawtucket, R. I., an affiliate company owned by Mr. Rindge and Jenks Arnold of Pawtucket and formerly operating as the American Gold Lace and Embroidery Mfg. Co. Mr. Rindge stated he believed the Arnold company to be the sole remaining manufacturers of gold lace trimming material, the majority of it formerly being produced by French or other foreign companies now defunct because of the war.

Mr. Rindge, who saw service in the first World War, is a lieutenant commander connected with the U. S. Naval Supply Base, Washington, D. C.

Fabrics, Linings

Other products of the woolen company include lining goods for U. S. Army ski caps, lining materials for Army field jackets, special Navy winter clothing of caps, jackets and trousers (known familiarly in the service as the "Man from Mars" outfit); linings for Navy commissioned officers' raincoats and overcoats, as well as

MILK DELIVERY CUT WILL GET 'A FAIR TRIAL'

The raw milk producers of the Newmarket area failed to meet in the Newmarket Town Hall last Sunday, as had been planned, for what was expected to be a protest against the new state-wide compulsory regulation which allows milk deliveries only every other day.

It was learned that County Agricultural Agent James Purington of Exeter could not be present on that day to discuss the situation, so the dealers were notified of cancellation of the session.

The dealers have now decided to take no further action against curtailed deliveries, for the present at least, and have asked for cooperation of their customers in following the new system.

"We want to give the every-other-day delivery plan a fair trial," said Caillixte Baillargeon, head of the local producers association, "but, as time goes on, if we find that our customers are too dissatisfied with the curtailment, then we will have a basis to take the complaints to County Agent Purington and see if anything can be done to improve the situation."

The Newmarket group, represented by F. Albert Sewall, expressed opposition to the curtailed deliveries when a hearing was held

Newmarket Boys In Dover Navy 'Avenge' Ceremony

Warren I. Russell and Charles D. Burton, both of Newmarket, were included among a dozen patriotic young men who participated in the nation-wide "Avenge Pearl Harbor Day" ceremonies by being sworn into the United States Navy on the steps of Dover City Hall last Sunday afternoon.

Lieut. Commander Frederick J. Shaw, U. S. N. administered the oath to the men, and Chief Water-tender Paul R. Myers, officer in charge of the navy recruiting station in Dover, explained the significance of the exercises and introduced Mayor F. Clyde Keefe of Dover, who acted as master of ceremonies. Invocation was given by the Rev. Alfred E. Young, pastor of the Advent Christian church in Dover, and Mayor Walter H. Wood of Rochester delivered an address.

Newmarket POLISH CLUB Notes

The next regular meeting of the club will be held Sunday afternoon, June 14.

A real hero's welcome awaits Joe Pete, who expected to come home on furlough from Camp Wetherell in Rhode Island around the end of the month. The boys have been pretty concerned about this soldier since he departed, because he has never written a letter, but Pvt. Walter Lambert, stationed at the same camp, has been visiting in town and brought the word that Joe would soon come home.

Note to Mike Sklarski: The boys at the club are still anxiously waiting to hear from you. As our good friends, the Chinese, would say: "Long time no letter."

The club has received excellent photographs of Nick and George Zuk, sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Zuk, who are in service, which will soon be published in this newspaper.

Pvt. Alphonse Pelletier, who doesn't happen to be a member of the club, has written to the editor from Fort Eustis, Va., that one of his favorite features of the paper is this Polish Club column.

Club members wish Grace Lewis much success in her new role as a restaurant owner.

Chester Kruczek, son of Andrew Kruczek, president of the club, has been promoted from private first class to corporal at Camp Niantic, Conn. Congratulations, Chet!

Stanley Pepek, recording secretary of the club, has left the Rockingham Shoe Co. to accept a position at the Portsmouth Navy Yard.

The boys think that a "Go Slow" sticker should hereafter be put on Frankie Pelczar's windshield when he goes motoring through Durham. We spare "Oula-La" a report on the horrible experience, but his pals hope—even for tire conservation alone—that he will adjust himself to the slower pace of life.

At last, it has happened! Adolph (Just Call Me Dola) Pohopek has been kidded plenty about his fishing expeditions. The skeptics blinked, however, last Sunday, when he modestly strolled into the club and displayed a 23-inch pickeral, which he had landed single-handed. His piscatorial triumph was even greater, however, because inside the huge fish was another pickeral which measured 11 inches—believe it or not. When the boys asked Dola where such fish were biting, the wise old fisherman answered, in true Red Skelton manner: "Would'n ou like to know?"

Mike Pelczar, now living in Meredith, has been back in town, doing some carpentering.

Misty Kustra is making elaborate preparations to launch his newest boat, "The Pride of the Lamp-réy." Throughout the week he has been trying to arrange with some pretty girl in the Women's Club to act as sponsor and smash a bottle of champagne over the bow. The mystery is: Who is buying the champagne?

When Radio Comedian Bob Burns pulled the joke on this week's program about corn that grew so fast that the planter had to hurry out of the way or be rocketed upward where he would have to make a long jump back, the club boys somehow thought of Stanley Szacik, who raises some pretty fast-maturing corn himself.

Thomas Filion Presents Bell To Camp Chapel

Thomas J. Filion of Newmarket has presented a church bell to Camp Langdon in Portsmouth for use in its chapel.

The bell arrived during last week and arrangements were immediately made for its installation, according to Lieut. Everett E. Denlinger, the camp chaplain.

The gift came as a result of a public appeal for such a bell made by Lieutenant Denlinger.

The bell, dated 1828 and apparently manufactured by George H. Holbrook in Medway, Mass., will serve to call soldiers of the Portsmouth Harbor Defenses to worship in the same manner as they were called in civilian life.

'Vic for Victory' Is Battle Cry As Morin Challenges Grochmal To Wrestling Bout

Something always happens in Newmarket when something else gets dull.

No sooner does the Humphreys-Langley pistol championship match pass into temporary oblivion, due to wartime conditions, than another great battle, which may have even greater possibilities, flashes onto the horizon.

Vic Morin has challenged George Grochmal to a winner-take-all, catch-as-catch-can wrestling match.

Details are meager at present, but Morin, despite differences in weight, insists he can take two falls out of three from Grochmal, and offers to post a sizeable side bet (probably with the editor) that he will emerge the winner.

Morin weighs around 140 pounds and Grochmal about 175, but the former demands the bout, so it is probable the Humane Society will not interfere with staging of the tussle.

A farewell party for members of the Catholic Youth Organization of St. Mary's church in Newmarket, who are in the graduating class at Newmarket high school, was held last Sunday at Rye Beach, in charge of the Rev. J. Desmond O'Connor and Austin J. McCaffrey, headmaster of the high school.

The outing program included singing, dancing and games, and lobster supper was enjoyed.

Honor guests were these CYO members who have already or soon will join Uncle Sam's armed forces: Clifford Griswold, Roger Proulx, Robert Laughlin and William Leuders.

Other seniors participating in the event were Eleanor Marelli, William McMullen, Delina Blanchette, Arlene Behan, Beatrice Morin, Erlene Lavoie and Arthur Smith.

George Grochmal is still looking for a pilot, but at present he is most concerned about tactics Morin may use. Since it is common knowledge that Morin is the inventor of a device which electrifies eels, George is wary about his opponent. George has followed horse racing enough (in newspapers at least) to know how the jockeys sometimes work the buzzer to pep up the banktails for a home stretch victory, but he fears Vic's device is even more deadly and would have an opposite effect. Interviewed after Vic had hurled his challenge, one of the town's leading sportsmen said: "I'm sure it's not a buzzer, a dive bomber or anything else that Grochmal has to worry about, but just Vic himself. Vic may be out-weighted, but I'm planking all my horse race, dog race, treasury balance pool and market stock profits on Vic. Hurrah—Vic for Victory!"

BROTHERS OF JONATHAN

A Novel by Marie Malmquist

CHAPTER 10

Image of Mother

Della was the image of her mother. She was playful as a kitten and as virile and, as she grew older, never tired of her tasks. When anything was given her to do, she went at it with a gay little laugh, yet so quietly that her mother sometimes wondered at her ability to turn work into play. She appeared to take nothing seriously, yet did everything right. It was her special delight to wait upon Mrs. Barton. She would bring her flowers from the garden or from the field, from anywhere as long as it was a flower. A certain small white starry flower, growing in the meadow late in the Fall, she named "God's Eyes," another was "Catclaws," and still another was "Goldbeads," for there were many of them together; and when later she heard someone calling them "Butter and Eggs," she told her mother, "I don't see why people can't keep the things we eat away from flowers. Things we eat are good, flowers are beautiful." The bright yellow flowers were "Goldbeads" to her even after she had grown up.

The chipmunk that had a nest in an old apple tree some distance away from the house craved special attention. The hollow was big and deep. Butternuts, walnuts, pignuts, hazelnuts, and even small chestnuts were stored inside the tree, and Mr. Barton had once said he wanted to cut the old tree down, but if he did the chipmunk would feel lost. Della had never seen more than one at a time; the other one must stay inside all the time, and three weer young chipmunks running about in early summer.

There were hens and chickens, and roosters and a few turkey gobblers. She was afraid to go near them, they looked so fierce. The pigeons were so tame she could pick them up in her two hands, but they refused to be stroked. The chickens would nestle down in her lap if she would let them, but they were seldom clean, and she wanted her pets to be clean, even though they were not pretty. The two horses in the barn she never went near, and she was afraid of the cow's horns. Once she ran into the kitchen and told her mother that the cow was crying. She made her go out to the barn and see for herself. Mrs. Lord went and sure enough, the tears were actually running down the cow's long cheeks.

The big geranium in the kitchen window she tended with the greatest of care. Dead leaves were forbidden on the stem. She stroked the velvety leaves and bent over the bright blooms as often as she passed the windowbox, and she was careful to water the plant just right. She cared nothing for dolls to play with; she did want her playthings to be alive.

Della would often ask about her father. Why didn't he come home when other children's fathers had come home from the war? The war must have been something awful since it had kept her father away for so long. Her mother couldn't explain—ever.

The Bartons learned to love the child as much as if she had been their own. She was a constant delight to everyone wherever she went, and she seemed to grow lovelier year by year.

When Gideon Simms and Priscilla Drew had been married a year, a letter came from Jim Grant. In it he wrote that he had been married two years, had the nicest wife in New York state, and was the proud father of a son named Jim. His wife had persuaded him that no other name would do for her husband's first son. Of course he had to give in to her argument. The truth of the matter was, that in his secret heart Jim had been pleased to have her insist upon that, and the boy had been named for himself. She had told that it would have to be "junior," for it would not do to have a young Jim and an old Jim in the house. Then the letter went on to tell some of the gossip around town: Hugh Clayton had not returned. There had been no news from him since he left Boston in 1861. His wife of six weeks had been left with a small sum of money, a stable of five horses, and with no other income. Not hearing from him, she had sold the horses, gathered together her few belongings, assumed her maiden name of Lord, and had moved with her little girl to some other part of the state.

That letter recalled to the memory of Simms the time in the town hall, on the platform of which had been two empty chairs. No doubt one had been meant for Clayton, and the second for someone he had not heard about. And then he happened to think how pleased Pap and Zeke would be to hear from "down state".

Having read the letter through a second time he went in search of the two. He found Pap in the garden, tying up some of the loose vines, and Zeke would be somewhere about. He would try to find him so as to read the letter to them both. Zeke always managed to find himself something to keep him busy in or about the house, or in the garden, or barn, or henyard, or perhaps in the woods. He would find him.

Zeke loved the northern woods. He never tired of roaming through the forest surrounding the village. Then he had found some playmates, a family living in the big house near the sawmill, the house that had been vacant until the Stiles moved in a short time before.

There were ten children, seven boys and three girls, a drunken father, and a worn-out mother. They had come from some place down South, and often talked about the Susquehanna. All the youngsters were bright and likeable, and all liked to have Zeke to play with. This afternoon Mr. Simms found him there, but something had gone wrong. Angry voices demanded that Zeke take back what he had said, or he would be hurt.

"Huh, you can't hurt me, you can't," Zeke was saying from up a tree.

"Huh, can't we," came the angry retort. "Just you come down from that tree and you'll find out." But Zeke didn't come down.

"What is up here?" Mr. Simms tried to suppress a grin. "Zeke is," one of the youngsters replied.

"No he ain't," said Zeke, dropping down like an ape, "Here I be, Mr. Simms."

"We want to get at him, Mr. Simms," angry voices demanded. "And why do you want to get at him?" he asked.

"He called us 'poor white trash' and we won't stand for that," said the oldest boy. "Of course you won't," burst from Mr. Simms. "Here, Zeke, take your medicine."

"I ain't going to take no medicine from them," declared Zeke. "Just you try to hurt me!"

tween electric light and telephone wires on one side of the street and the branches of a large tree on the other. Shortly before 3 p. m. the structure was lowered into the street.

Then it was loaded onto a giant trailer truck, and after being left in the street during the night, was started early the next morning for Lynn, Mass., where, it is understood, the General Electric Co. will install it contact, replacing the floor, roof and walls, between two of its own plants.

Despite a maze of power wires with which the crane crew had to contend, the only casualty resulting from the job was the loosening of a street light and the knocking off of its shade.

Traffic was not very heavy through Newmarket's main section last Sunday and the wrecking job caused little inconvenience. Cars were sent up Central street, across Spring street, and down Elm street, near the Lamprey River bridge. Officer John Valiere, who was on regular day duty, had general supervision over the re-routing task, assisted by Special Officers Theodore Filion, Joseph Proulx and Stanley Grochmal.

Dover Refuses School Bus To Carry Shoe Help

The Wentworth Bus Lines in Dover has been refused permission by the Dover School Committee to use one of the school busses to transport shoe workers from Dover to the Sam Smith Shoe Corp. plant in Newmarket.

The transportation committee had recommended that the Wentworth company's request be granted, but opposition was started in a letter from Committeeman Ernest Christensen, who was unable to attend the session, but, stated in his communication, "We cancelled the contract with another bus line firm for doing just what the Wentworth company wants to do now."

Another opponent of the plan, Committeeman Bernard D. O'Kane, commented: "If the government wants these busses, all well and good, but this is a matter purely between the city of Dover and the Wentworth Bus Lines as to whether or not a contract shall be broken."

Mayor Keefe also voted against granting use of the bus to carry the shoe workers.

missioned officers' aviation overcoats.

Fabrics are produced which go into the Army's protective winter hoods, and for the so-called U. S. Military Academy drill shirts, the latter having been manufactured for years prior to the present war for the cadets at West Point, Manlius and Citadel military institutions. Also produced are fabrics for the U. S. Navy, Coast Guard and Maritime Service trousers and undress and dress blouses.

In addition to the white Navy blankets, another covering known as the U. S. Navy Type "D" crew blanket is manufactured.

Bandages

The mills are also producing roll upon roll of Red Cross bandages for use by the U. S. Medical Corps units, as well as thousands of yards of red woolen rolled bandages used by the U. S. Cavalry in the care and treatment of horses' legs.

Approximately 1800 men and women are employed at the concern's four mills, one thousand of that number working at the Gonic and East Rochester branches (about 500 at each). Every employee is to be congratulated on his or her part in aiding the war effort.

Work Important

Whether welding plates on the hull of a destroyer, forging barrels for mighty coastal defense guns, assembling powerful motors for flying fortresses or carefully and steadily weaving the fabrics which clothe our men in service, each process is vital to itself and to each other. The ultimate goal—Victory and a world of untrod Democracy—will unswervingly be attained.

Rochester's hats are off to its industrial employees of its war plants, and to the executive management which has given our city the medium to do its part in our great national effort.

Every cord of wood cut for fuel actually releases up to a ton of coal or 200 gallons of fuel oil for wartime purposes and saves use of space on ships and railroad cars needed for transport of military.

Best combinations for a deep-rooted pasture that will grow even in midsummer dry weather is ladino clover seeded with a strong growing grass such as orchard grass, smooth brome grass or Reed canary grass, according to Ford S. Prince, agronomist of the University of New Hampshire.

MANY ELDERLY MEN WORK AT EXETER PLANT

In at least one Exeter industrial plant—the Exeter Brass Works—there is a fine example of the part which elderly men are playing at benches to help America win the war. A number of the employees there are well over 75 years old, but continue to do their jobs in very efficient manner.

One of the old-timers is George Farrell, 78, who works shoulder to shoulder with his 28-year-old grandson, Frederick. There is also Willie S. Day, around 75, Exeter's first Democratic representative to the State Legislature.

Others include Charles Kidd, who has worked for the firm 40 years; Napoleon Denencour, with 35 years service; William Tyrel and Joseph Colbath.

The brass works also boasts among its employees, Edward N. Richards, town clerk; Lawrence Brown, jeweler; Austin Brown, a barber; Edward S. Chase, retired rural mail carrier; Timothy Sullivan, an electrician; and Lee Claxton of Epping, who formerly was in the meat and provision business.

BAY STATERS ARE HELD FOR EXETER THEFT

Ernest W. Wing, 32, and Freddie Gadoski, 22, both of Newburyport, Mass., are being held in $3,000 bail each for the October term of Rockingham County Superior Court, after being arraigned in Exeter Municipal Court on charges of breaking and entering and larceny from the house of John Tropilo at 29 South street, Exeter.

The pair, who were trailed by Chief of Police Thomas R. Chrysler to Newburyport, where police said part of the loot was recovered, are alleged to have jimmied a window in the Tropilo home. Police say jewelry, bankbooks, naturalization papers, government bonds and other articles were stolen.

Some of these articles were burned in Newburyport, while others were tossed into a pond in South Hampton, according to police. Chief Chrysler said he was able, however, to recover a burned handkerchief and a few articles as evidence against the defendants.

Close Shave, But Navy Says "No"

According to our reports, Doucet heard barbers were being welcomed with open razors in the armed forces, but when he reported at a navy recruiting station he was rejected on the eyesight requirement, which the navy follows strictly.

Dejectedly, the tonsorial artist is understood to have said when he returned to Newmarket for at least a temporary stay:
